Brian Duguid posted:

I was fortunate to see him in the hospital while he still had some strength. I showed him pictures and videos of his grandkids which made him smile. He had difficulty speaking and I couldn't hear what he was saying with one exception. He said, "I am glad you came. I love you.". He told me that often when I came to visit, so it wasn't the first time I've heard those words, but it meant a lot to me that he made sure I heard them now.
